

REALE ACTIVES × SEPHORA

PORTFOLIO STRATEGY & CREATIVE DIRECTION

Your life.
Your Reale routine.

A retail partnership built around guided trial
and repeat purchase

The partnership has to earn its place

Reale has a founder who can bring people to the launch.

The opportunity for Reale
Become a routine shoppers choose even when Alix is off-screen.

Sephora already has reasons for shoppers to visit.

The opportunity for Sephora
Turn attention into a useful skincare experience and incremental sales.

Business question: can guided trial create customers who come back?

Why this is a credible launch to test

A clear product starting point

Five products cover makeup removal, cleansing, serums and moisturizer.

A reason to educate

Reale publishes formulation details and product-specific study summaries.

A current commerce opportunity

Sephora Drop Shop pairs creator teasers with a live product reveal.

Proposed positioning: a manageable starting routine for acne-prone adults.

What Reale gains beyond another shelf

Demand beyond the founder

Beauty Advisors and other creators introduce Reale to shoppers who do not follow Alix.

A lower-friction first purchase

A small trial and a clear routine card reduce the risk of buying several unfamiliar products.

A reason to replenish

Education and follow-up help shoppers understand what to keep using.

Retail learning that improves the brand

Aggregate trial, repeat and returns data show which entry products deserve investment.

What Sephora gains

A creator audience with a product reason to visit

Use founder attention to invite a routine check, then let advisors and products carry the experience.

A guided entry into the skincare basket

Recommend only relevant steps. Allow shoppers to keep products they already use.

A measurable category contribution

Compare sales, repeat purchase and returns with stores that offer ordinary launch merchandising.

Shopper test: does guided trial make Reale easier to choose in Sephora's existing assortment?

The shopper and the insight

“I can keep plans in my calendar.
I need skincare I can actually keep up with.”

Working audience

Adults 18–29 who wear makeup, shop prestige beauty,
and feel unsure about adding actives.

Research hypothesis, not a shopper quote. Validate with 12 interviews and a 100-person concept test before selecting the final message.

The campaign platform

Your life.

Your Reale routine.

Life supplies the invitation.

Your preferences and current routine guide the choice.

The memorable behavior

A Reale Routine Check ends with one starting point, a take-home card and a trial invitation at Sephora.

The Reale Routine Check

01 Choose your goal

Makeup removal, hydration or ingredient education.

02 Keep what works

Keep products you already use.
Start with one relevant step.

03 Save your card

Save its role and directions.
Try it before adding more.

Shopping guidance. No skin scan or acne scoring. Digital experience is a concept mockup.

A routine card to take home

One compact fixture

A short advisor conversation fits into an ordinary store visit.

One useful output

A routine card links the product choice to trial and follow-up.

Service prototype. Fixture dimensions, staffing and print setup require a store operations test.

A Sephora trial designed to start small

The Reale Starting Point A proposed trial sleeve for Pore Power + Dew More.

Retailer exclusive: the format and guidance.
Reale keeps its full-size DTC assortment.
Seven days introduces the routine.
It does not promise acne results.

Proposed free sampling format. Fill sizes, tolerance guidance and availability require brand approval.

Product proof earns a visible place

Go Deep 8% mandelic acid

The brand reports an independent study of 31 participants over 8 weeks, using dermatologist grading and instruments.

Every proof post shows the product role, the evidence type and the usage link.

Brand-reported study summary. Full study and approved wording required before live advertising.

The reveal gives attention a next step

Tease / T-14 to T-1

Alix shows a mint routine card beside a Sephora bag. Caption: “My routine has a new address.”

Reveal / Launch day

Proposed LIVE: founder context, dermatologist product education and an advisor Routine Check.

Shop / After the reveal

Preview full-size products. Direct viewers to the proposed Starting Point trial and store experience.

Drop Shop route: a new exclusive trial format first, then the agreed wider rollout.
Fallback: Sephora.com reveal and selected stores if Drop Shop is unavailable.

Reale beyond the founder

Founder / One launch invitation
Personal context creates the opening.

12 adult creators / Six life contexts
Commutes, full glam, study days, shift work, travel and training. Show actual use.

6 advisors / Repeatable education
Explain one product role at a time.
Eligible creators link to Sephora storefronts.

Trial has a follow-up, not a hard sell

Moment	Useful message	Next action
Day 0	Your starting point + full label directions	Save the routine card
Day 3	What the product does and how to introduce it	View usage guide
Day 7	How did the texture and routine fit feel?	Get help or shop one full size
Day 30 / 60 / 90	Check satisfaction, then ask about replenishment	Reorder when needed

Opt-in follow-up stays with Sephora. Reale receives aggregate reporting.

A pilot before a national rollout

Preparation / 6 weeks

Shopper research, claims review, trial production, advisor training and stock planning.

Launch & learn / 12 weeks

8 activation stores + 8 matched standard-launch stores. Online launch supports both groups.

Repeat readout / Through day 90

Follow the final first-purchase cohort long enough to assess repeat behavior.

Week 4: refine guidance. Week 12: review sales.
Scale after the full 90-day cohort and contribution review.

The scorecard protects both businesses

Question	Measure	Decision
Did Reale reach new buyers?	New-to-Reale purchasers + source recall	Separate founder and other discovery
Did trial help?	30-day full-size buyers / qualified trials	Compare guided and standard trial
Did Sephora grow the category?	Category sales change vs matched stores	Check displacement and returns
Did shoppers come back?	90-day repeat / first-time buyer cohort	Review contribution after costs

Planning goals: +15% Reale sales per store-week and no category decline vs control.
Illustrative gates, not expected results. Confirm sample size and baselines before launch.

The pilot is a learning investment

$150,000

Illustrative activation budget. Split and retailer terms to negotiate.

5,000 qualified trials × 10% full-size conversion × $66 basket
= $33,000 of first-purchase retail sales in the base scenario.

This scenario does not repay the pilot. Wider sales, repeat purchase and actual margin determine the case for expansion. No ROI claim appears in this proposal.

What the partnership should protect

Reale keeps its brand and customer relationships

Retain full-size DTC availability and original identity. Limit any exclusive to a defined launch format.

Both partners agree on useful learning

Share SKU sales, trial cohorts, repeat and returns in aggregate under negotiated reporting terms.

Expansion follows profitable demand

Review brand wholesale contribution, retailer contribution and DTC displacement before broader distribution.

Proposed next step: a feasibility workshop and shopper tests.

Appendix / Assortment and entry roles

Product	Current DTC price	Proposed education role
Get Bare	$29	Makeup removal
Pore Power	$28	Exfoliating cleanser
Go Calm	$39	10% azelaic acid serum
Go Deep	$39	8% mandelic acid serum
Dew More	$38	Moisturizer

Prices checked September 30, 2026. Proposed launch prices and assortment require agreement.

Appendix / Budget and scenarios

Activation allocation	Illustrative cost
Paid media / trial production & guidance	$40,000 / $30,000
Store fixture & training / creative	$25,000 / $20,000
Creators / measurement / reserve	$15,000 / $10,000 / $10,000
Total activation budget	$150,000

Qualified trials: 5,000 Basket proxy: $66
8% conversion: $26,400 10%: $33,000 16%: $52,800
